I don't know. Must be magic.

A story of experience, strength, and hope

Step Nine: Made direct amends to such people wherever possible except when to do so would injure them or others.

While all of the twelve steps are powerful spiritual tools, Step Nine to me is absolutely magical. There is no rational reason it ought to bring about the complete destruction of the ego's most potent weapon — guilt — but it does just that. And guilt's quiet little brother, shame, positively shrivels up like a salted garden slug. Rendered impotent, guilt and shame become but memories, like the shadows of a nightmare.

How does this miraculous transformation come about? I do not know. Must be magic. But knowing the mechanism of the transformation is as pointless as needing to know why the ship is sinking. Survival is all that matters. Just get your butt into a life-boat and start rowing away before you get sucked into the whirlpool!

AA literature shows a very thorough and well-travelled course of action for navigating the tricky waters of Steps Eight and Nine. Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions describes the most common "reasons" for NOT making amends. And like many, if not most of us, I can easily relate to them, even while that devious little alcoholic mind is busy looking for loopholes.

With amends, every "easier, softer" path leads only to shoals and disaster. As with the other eleven steps, what is really important in Step Nine is the ACTION required. To the alcoholic mind, navigating these most unfamiliar waters seems to be disaster in the making.

Tradition Nine

Spiritual Simplicity vs. Functional Simplicity

AA, as such, ought never be organized; but we may create service boards or committees directly responsible to those they serve.

AAhhhhh, the paradox of AA's message. We ought not organize, but we must.

This is the essence of Tradition Nine. Do not tell us what to do, but lovingly suggest, and we respond. Such is the miracle of our spiritual program.

We must not organize our recovery program, but we must organize the carrying of the message. Or, as Bill W. put it. "Face chaos and uncertainty."

If someone had told me, as a newcomer to AA, where I had to fit in and what I had to do, I never would have gotten sober.

How does a person whose life is too fatally unmanageable step into a strict organizational hierarchy? The truth is, he does not.

The true genius of AA's traditions is there are many spiritual guides that provide "wobble room" if you would, for the many different personalities and egos that come together.

The traditions are the results of experience, and we abide by them, not because we have to but because not to is to die.

We have two dictators in

AA. The first is booze. Disregarding the traditions or fighting one another will drive us to drink, and for us to drink is to die.

The second and most important dictator is love of Alcoholics Anonymous. The love of the program makes us want to fit in and not want to do anything to hurt one another. Thus Tradition Nine allows us to leave the program to spiritual simplicity while organizing from the group level all the way to GSO.

I don't know. Must be magic.

After all, to make amends requires admitting that I've made a mistake, that I was wrong! And I have spent a lifetime doing my best to never admit I was wrong about anything. People hurt me! I didn't hurt them except perhaps in retaliation. I have been the victim, not the perpetrator!

Hiding from my faults has become so second nature that only an expert surgeon could crack through my defenses. Luckily, such a surgeon is close at hand — my sponsor.

Having navigated these waters previously, he becomes my new captain. He helps me to look only at myself and ignore what was "done to me." He shows me, usually through the simple expedient of telling some of his own story, that I have not only minimized the harms I have done others, but simultaneously I have hurt just about everybody I've ever known. I was the best of men, I was the worst of men. No wonder people thought me insane!

Captain Sponsor, though, knows exactly how to clear the fog of self-induced hypnosis. It takes a bit of getting used to, this shift of perception. And few would do it at all except for one thing — fear of returning to alcohol.

Tentatively, a list of "possibles" is drawn up — people I may have harmed — and also a list which includes almost everyone I ever knew, especially those I knew intimately. For many, this list begins with family, whether they are speaking to us or not.

Then there are the ones I owe money. They are the easiest to recall, according to the sponsor. He suggests that there may have been some I caused physical harm, perhaps in a car accident or a bar fight. What about my kids? I scared the hell out of them, punished them, verbally abused them, embarrassed them and then ignored or abandoned them. How do I make amends for those harms?

Friends I screwed over then abandoned without a word of explanation. Bosses I hated and denigrated. Co-workers I used or despised and gossiped about. What about all the people whose feelings I had hurt, inadvertently or on purpose? The list seemed endless, the task hopeless.

But Captain Sponsor keeps me at the wheel, guiding, suggesting, pointing out the difference between true harm and imaginary harm dreamed up by the alcoholic mind to keep guilt and shame alive.

"There is a way to make amends to everyone on your list", he says, though how is something hard to imagine. "Money could be repaid, if only a little at a time. Harms done to loved ones, friends, and co-workers could be alleviated, too. I could become trustworthy once again and perhaps those whose trust I violated could trust me again. The very act of making amends changes the person to whom you are making it," he says.

"No longer can such persons see the rest of the world as untrustworthy and indifferent. You become a bright spot in their lives — someone who acknowledged his own part in harms done. Presto, the world is a little brighter for your efforts."

And so I set about these tasks, these amends, and commenced to try my best. Step Nine requires such great humility and perseverance that it is a wonder anyone ever completes the tasks they've voluntarily set. It would be so easy to just forget the whole thing, let sleeping dogs lie. But Captain Sponsor knows what I'm thinking. And he exhorts me to keep at it.

Eventually something amazing happens. Some spiritual programs call it a "paradigm shift." In AA, we call it a spiritual awakening. Perception changes from self focused to other focused. And those sterling promises we hear read at the beginning of every meeting begin to come true. And, if we are fortunate, someone pins a Captain label on us and calls us sponsor. The circle is then complete. But without Step Nine and its magic, it would never have happened.

STEP NINE

“Made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except when to do so would injure them or others.”

A Tranquil mind is the first requisite for good judgment. Good timing is important in making amends. What is courage? Prudence means taking calculated chances. Amends begin when we join AA. Peace of mind cannot be bought at the expense of others. Need for discretion. Readiness to take consequences of our past and to take responsibility for well-being of others is spirit of Step Nine.

Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions, page 7

Good judgment, a careful sense of timing, courage, and prudence—these are the qualities we shall need when we take Step Nine.

After we have made the list of people we have harmed, have reflected carefully upon each instance and have tried to possess ourselves of the right attitude in which to proceed, we will see the making of direct amends divides those we should approach into several classes. There will be those who ought to be dealt with just as soon as we become reasonably confident that we can maintain our sobriety. There will be those to whom we can make only partial restitution, lest complete disclosures do them or others more harm than good. There will be other cases where action ought to be deferred, and still others in which by the very nature of the situation we shall never be able to make direct personal contact at all.

Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions, page 83

Above all, we should try to be absolutely sure that we are not delaying because we are afraid.

For the readiness to take the full consequences of our past acts, and to take responsibility for the wellbeing of others at the same time, is the very spirit of Step Nine.

Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions, page 87

TRADITION NINE

Each AA group needs the least possible organization. Rotating leadership is the best. The small group may elect its secretary, the large group its rotating committee, and the groups of a large metropolitan area their central or intergroup committee, which often employs a full-time secretary.

The trustees of the General Service Board are, in effect our A.A. General Service Committee. They are the custodians of our AA Tradition and the receivers of voluntary AA contributions by which we maintain our AA General Service Office at New York. They are authorized by the groups to handle our overall public relations and the guarantee the integrity of our principal newspaper, the AA Grapevine.

All such representatives are to be guided in the spirit of service, for true leaders in AA are but trusted and experienced servants of the whole. They derive no real authority from their titles; they do not govern. Universal respect is the key to their usefulness.

*Tradition Nine, Long Form
Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions, page 191*

The General Service Conference, the board of trustees, and group committees cannot issue directives to AA members of groups. AA's can't be dictated to—individually or collectively. Absence of coercion works because unless each AA follows suggested Steps to recovery, he signs his own death warrant. Same condition applies to the group. Suffering and love are AA's disciplinarians. Difference between spirit of authority and spirit of service. Aim of our services is to bring sobriety within reach of all who want it.

CONCEPT NINE

No matter how carefully we design our service structure of principles and relationships, no matter how well we apportion authority and responsibility, the operating results of our structure can be better than the personal performance of those who must man it and make it work. Good leadership cannot function well in a poorly designed structure . . . Weak leadership can hardly function at all, even in the best of structures.

A leader in AA service is therefore a man (or woman) who can personally put principles, plans and policies into such dedicated and effective action that the rest of us want to back him and help with his job.

Good leadership will also remember that a fine plan or idea can come from anybody, any where. Consequently, good leadership will often discard its own cherished plans for others that are better, and it will give credit to the source.

Our leaders do not drive by mandate, they lead by example. We say to them, “Act for us, but do not boss us.”

“The Twelve Concepts for World Service,” pamphlet, page 8

Concept IX Checklist

- Good service leadership at all levels is indispensable for our future functioning and safety. Primary world service leadership, once exercised by the founders must necessarily be assumed by the trustees.
- Do we discuss how we can best strengthen the composition and leadership of our future trusted servants?
- Do we recognize the need for group officers? What is our criteria for election? Do we sometimes give a position to someone “because it would be good for them?”
- Do I set a positive leadership example?

Book of the Month Alcoholic Anonymous Comes of Age

More than half a century has gone by since AA's historic 1955 Convention in St. Louis, when the founding members passed on to the entire Fellowship the responsibility for the three Legacies of Recovery, Unity, and Service. This book takes AA members and interested friends on a quick tour of the Convention, traces the history and development of the Three Legacies and looks at AA through the eyes of some early non-alcoholics who influenced the Fellowship's history.

The first part is co-founder Bill W.'s reminiscent sketch of the Convention, in which he takes an appreciative look at many of the participants and reflects on events that shaped AA.

The second part consists of Bill's three Convention talks, edited and enlarged, on the Legacies of Recovery, Unity, and Service. Here is Bill's story--how he drank, got sober, met Dr. Bob and other founding members, and how they struggled together to keep AA going, with little guidance beyond the lessons of experience. Then Bill moves on to describe how the Twelve Traditions developed as AA's protective shield against the human faults that lead alcoholics into trouble, drunk or sober. And he finishes by laying out the development of AA services, culminating in the formation of the General Service Conference to serve as guardian of the AA's Traditions and world services.

In the third part, readers will meet five early friends of AA: Dr. Harry Tiebout, the first psychiatrist to openly espouse AA, Dr. W.W. Bauer of the American Medical Association; Jesuit Father Edward Dowling and Episcopal priest Dr. Samuel Shoemaker, both of whom helped shape AA's spiritual principles; and Bernard B. Smith, attorney and longtime chair of the General Service Board. These non-alcoholics tell of their association with AA, the part they played in its development, and their view of what the future holds.

Tradition Nine Spiritual Simplicity vs. Functional Simplicity

Organizing with service boards from the group level where they decide where we should meet or whether we have cookies at meetings or not all the way "up" to the General Service Conference where our representatives communicate our wishes to the entire fellowship. What a miraculous way of doing things for people who were totally unmanageable.

Attend your group's next business meeting — or as well call them, group conscience meetings — and stop for a moment and reflect on the wisdom of our traditions, especially Tradition Nine, through which we can see the difference in spiritual simplicity versus functional simplicity.

Prepared by Bob C. The views, expressions, and opinions presented here are those of the author and not necessarily those of AA or Intergroup 17 Inc.
